KEEPER M'MAHON HAS GOT HIS EYES OPEN FOR 'EM.

on the Mayorless City Jan't Running the Dog Pound Somebody Has Got to Profit by It-The Mongreis Can Go Free, for They Cost 40 Cents Aptece and Bring in Nothing at All.

If the City Chamberlain wants any money from John McMahon, keeper of the dog pound at One hundred and Second street and East river, he will have to bring back that Mayor, or else see that some one is out in the Mayor's office who can put his John Hancock on the warrants which allow John to draw his money.

At present the veteran poodle destroyer is arrying on a little dog speculation of his Old John McMahon knows a thing or two, and it would be strange, indeed, if he allowed such an opportunity as is now offered to pass

"But I don't care much now," he added.

"I will get along well enough. You see I maly pay 40 cents for each dog caught, and I receive $3 for all redeemed.

"Now, if I figure it up right, 40 cents from $8 leaves a net profit of $2.60 on each of the pet dogs, and if the dog-catchers don't gobble up anything but pet dogs -ah, ha!" and John jumped up in the air, kicked his heels together three times, and landed with a hilarious whoop and a wide, sly smile.

"I could afford to pay more for the pet tlogs, for you know a person will generally give the last cent to have his dear doggie back home again, and this is especially the case if the owner be a woman.

"Here comes a woman now who, although she is poor, as you can see, will be tickled to death to get off with only three dollars.

"We made a clean scoop this morning by growning a hundred dogs, and I have already got in several fine specimens of thoroughbreds which will bring in a good profit.

"They say I have no money, do they?

Well, just you look here."

John pulled out of each of four pockets a large wad of bills, and displayed several hundred dollars.

"Now, I am all right as long as the pet dogs are brought in, and I'll be blarsted if I take anything else until I get some money from the city. What is the use of my carrying on a losing game when I am boss exclusively of the whole shebang."

John's logic is indeed good, and all the pet dogs who read this article had better look but.

As for the mongrels and street dogs, they can go as crazy as a bedbug until the Mayor returns if they want to. They can roam around town unmolested by the dog-catchers.

IF ALDERMAN DOWLING WERE HERE.

The City Might Have for Once a Red-Mustached Mayer.

Chief Clerk Arthur Berry is still very lonesome at the Mayor's office. "No Mayor has yet shown up," he remarked to-day to an EVENING WORLD reporter, as he looked over Evening World reporter, as he looked over a pile of warrants.

The friends of President Forster, of the Board of Aldermen, are sorry he is not here to have a chance to be Acting Mayor.

"He would be very proud of the honor," remarked a Wigwam statesman.

There is mourning in the Seventh Ward. Alderman Dowling is Vice-President of the Board, and in the absence of the Mayor and President of the Board, Mr. Dowling would to-day be seated in Mayor Hewitt's chair. Alderman Dowling, however, is in the country. If he had not gone away, New York City would for the first time in its history have had a red-mustached man acting as Mayor.

There have been Mayors and acting-Mayors with black musiaches, dark and gray beards, but never has a man with a red mustache been seated in the Mayor's chair.

The absence of Alderman Dowling at this time may defeat his re-election to the Board. The people of the Seventh Ward are indigmant at having lost a chance of greeting one of their neighbors with a "How are you, Mr. Mayor?"

A Newspaper's Real Power.

[From the Charleston (S. C.) Budget.]
The New York WORLD has at last scored a triumph in its famous fight against the bobtail street cars of that city. Mayor Hewitt has decided to sign the ordinance passed recently by the Board of Aldermen compelling one of the street rallway mpanies of New York to employ conductors. The successful termination of this fight on the part of the New York WonLD is but another evidence of the great power of a newspaper which impresses the people with the wisdom and sincerity of its motives, and which wins their admiration and esteem by the persistent energy which it evinces in accomplishing a reform which it has set about

Charles Palmer Wanted to Die, But Won't Tell Why.

Charles Palmer, who says he is a bookkeeper, thirty-five years old, and has been living at 144 East Twenty-eighth street, is at the Chambers Street Hospital. He is suffering from the effects of a dose of creosote taken with suicidal intent, and became conscious at 5 a. M. to-day, after six hours of insensibility.

He was found by Policeman Newton, of the Old slip squad, who heard some one groaning in Jeannett-Park, the new inclos-ure at Coenties alip and Front street.

In order to investigate the origin of the sounds the officer had to climb over the iron fence, 6 feet high, for the park is not yet open to the public. In the centre of the park he found Palmer lying in a -cemingly dying condition and near him a small bottle labelled "creosote." The man h d neither hat, cost nor vet, and was in a generally dilapidated condition.

BIG BREWERY CONSOLIDATION.

English Capital to Control the Production of American Beer.

The leading topic among New York brewers and brewerymen is the consolidation of the great establishments of H. Clausen and Flansgan, Nay & Co., and the incorporation of their interests into the New York Breweries Company, as told by a cable to this morning's WOBLD.

English capital to the amount of $5,000,000.

English capital to the amount of $5,000,000, in the hands of a syndicate, will control the business. Lawyer Samuel Untermeyer, sent abroad by the American proprietors, made the arrangements for the transfer of the property and settled the conditions.

Both breweries will be kept in operation, but their profit will go into the common treasury. The old proprietors retain an interest, and will for a time keep up their active management, though it is said the conditions of the transfer provide for their retirement at the end of a year.

Reasons given for the change are that the late proprietors were getting old and wished to step out of business. They sought English capital, it is alleged, because they ould find no American money ready for the investment.

The report that four Boston breweries had also been secured by the syndicate is denied, and prominent brewers acout the idea that there is to be an English monopoly over all the principal breweries of this country.

No Thanks to Mr. Specht that He Was Happy Father, So He Was Sent Up. His supper wasn't good enough for John Specht, of 205 Eldridge street, last night, and he beat his wife so that Policeman Kappes heard her shricks and locked up the husband in a cell at the Eldridge street station.

When the case was called at the Essex Market Police Court this morning the wife did not appear. She sent the following letter to Justice Duffy:

Mr. Judge: I was taken sick last night. I gave that to a son. I am without money. I leave it to your judgment to do with him as you think best.

Policeman Kappes said that he had been to the house to get Mrs. Specht to come to court, but he found her fondling the new baby. He believed she would rather have him discharged than punished.

"Let me go home to my wife and child," pleaded the prisoner.

"Much you care for her to beat her at such a time. I won't let you go. One month in the Workhouse."

The General has been hovering around this city for a month or more, dividing his time between visiting with his family at a summer resort on the Jersey coast and running into town just to get a hint on politics.

He came direct from Washington, this morning, however, where he attended the funeral of Gen. Sheridan, who was a warm personal friend of his.

Gen. Alger has not at all the disposition of a recluse, and this morning he seated himself, shortly after his arrival, on one of the blue plush settees in the hotel corridor, and was "at home" to any one who cared to call. He did not remain there long, however, and Clerk Carr, who informed an Evening World Responsible of the Moslo reporter that the General was not in his room, said he "must have been carried away by some admirer."
